about x-acto®

Now a familiar sight on hobbyists' worktables and in art studios, on draftsmen's boards and on industrial production lines — in fact, wherever there's a need for a precise, sharp, economical cutting tool — X-acto knives were originally designed for surgical use. The perfectly balanced knives met the most demanding requirements of surgeons for delicate precise instruments.

In 1935, X-acto developed a new hobby and craft line adapted from the highly successful surgical knives and blades. The new line included eight special purpose knife handles and over thirty different styles of blades, gouges, routers, saws and punches. These new tools quickly became the favorites of two generations of hobbyists, and have made the name X-acto practically synonymous with modelmaking.

Today, the X-acto name is known from coast to coast. Not only for knives and blades, but for a complete line of tools that includes everything from precision tweezers to graphic arts aids, leathercraft tools to specialized industrial items, plexon to hand-somely designed hobby kits for customizing and repairing model automobiles.

And X-acto never rests on its laurels. Alert to the constantly increasing needs of industry and the constantly changing desires of hobbyists and craftsmen, X-acto's research and development is continually designing new items and improving old ones to serve its customers better and more economically.

Since the company was established, X-acto's policy has always been to help dealers and jobbers expand their markets and increase their sales. Extensive consumer and trade advertising, eye-catching packaging, effective merchandiser and display units and a constant flow of new products have all implemented this policy.

We hope this catalog will be of use to you. However, if you have any questions or want additional information about X-acto products or prices, please contact X-acto directly.

uses in industry

X-acto Precision Tools for small assemblies are now extensively used by engineers and production-line workers in the following industries: aeronautical, automotive, ceramic, chemical, electrical, electronic, glass, metalworking, paper, petroleum, photographic, plastic, rubber, textile and others.

X-acto precision cutting tools in particular are being adopted in the industrial field where they are fast replacing clumsy, hazardous cutting devices such as razor blades and jack-knives.

Below are just a few of the many applications revealed in an industry on-the-job survey.

knife & blade merchandisers

No. 218 MERCHANDISER

Now you can have X-acto's world famous, precision knives—indispensable in performing hundreds of tasks—in your own store, in a new display unit that crowds big profits into a few inches of space, either on your counter or as a pegboard unit.

X-acto is a name that sells—and it re-sells. X-acto knives need X-acto blades, surgically sharp blades that are quickly replaced, and a source of continuing sales for the X-acto dealer.

The #218 merchandiser includes:

x-acto

People have almost always found new ways to use existing products. Take X-Acto's famous knives, for example.

Originally developed for surgery, industry soon caught on to X-Acto's secret of success—surgically-sharp, easily-interchangeable blades that did almost everything on the payroll except take shorthand. (And even secretaries discovered these wonderful knives were invaluable in correcting stencils, making erasures, opening packages, cutting clippings and so forth.)

X-Acto knives today are used to cut everything from gaskets to patterns; to clean burrs, oxides and extrusions; to strip insulation and scrape emulsions; to engrave plastics and erase errors in printed circuits.

SHARPLY SHARP INTERCHANGEABLE BLADES

We don't suggest X-acto blades for shaving

But with 28 interchangeable blades, there's an X-acto knife that's perfect for:

- |                             |                             |                        |
|-----------------------------|-----------------------------|------------------------|
| scraping emulsions          | erasing typing mistakes     | opening packages       |
| correcting printed circuits | testing strain gauges       | peeling rubber flash   |
| deburring metal parts       | trimming flash from plastic | skiving flexible foams |
| cutting gaskets             | chipping paint              | engineering mock-ups   |
| retouching photographs      | dissecting lab specimens    | doing mechanicals      |
| shaping templates           | stripping electric wire     | cropping artwork       |
| dressing potting compounds  | constructing models         | ■ Incidentally—we      |
| repairing meter movements   | cleaning typewriter keys    | do suggest razor       |
| clipping articles           | slicing styrofoam           | blades for shaving.    |

These are 14 of our most popular blades.

blades for all trades
(yours, too)

They scrape emulsions, correct printed circuits, debur metal parts, shape templates, cut gaskets and repair meter movements. They are on assembly lines and in offices, in engineering departments and in studios. You can even use them for making paper dolls or wood cuts. They do just about everything, and they do it easier, safer and faster. Best news of all, X-Acto knives, with 28 easily interchangeable blades, do the job inexpensively. Try X-Acto blades in your plant.
